Technics sx-G100 Truly Classic Organ Sounds Of Yesterday and Today

Technics Musical Instruments, a division of Panasonic, proudly presents a new sound technology breakthrough created expressly for the music you love. Faithfully reproduced vintage organ sounds and powerful bass tones let you play your favorite music the way it was meant to sound. An elegantly styled cabinet in golden oak imparts a feeling of warmth and nostalgia, as you explore the sx-G100's wealth of authentic rhythms, registrations and styles.

Technics has set a new standard of excellence for ease of operation with its huge palette of easy-to-select sounds, presets, features and rhythms: and a newly angled lit control panel and a large LCD screen for maximum visibility.

The new music stand places the music closer to the musician.

Technics Recalls 10 of the World's Vintage Organ Sounds

Once only a faded memory, the organ sounds of yesterday are now at your fingertips again. From a big pipe organ to an old theater organ. From a classical European organ to the vintage American organ, complete with electric drawbars. It is now easy to recreate these wondrous sounds with the Technics G100

The matching organ bench is cushioned and upholstered in a rich, plush fabric. The seat opens to reveal a storage area for song books, floppy disks, etc.

For more information visit www.technicsusa.com or better yet, bring a song book and visit Royal Music and try playing this incredible instrument. You won't believe your ears.

EDITORS NOTE:

When Panasonic, one of the world's largest companies, manufactures an instrument it is certainly worth note.

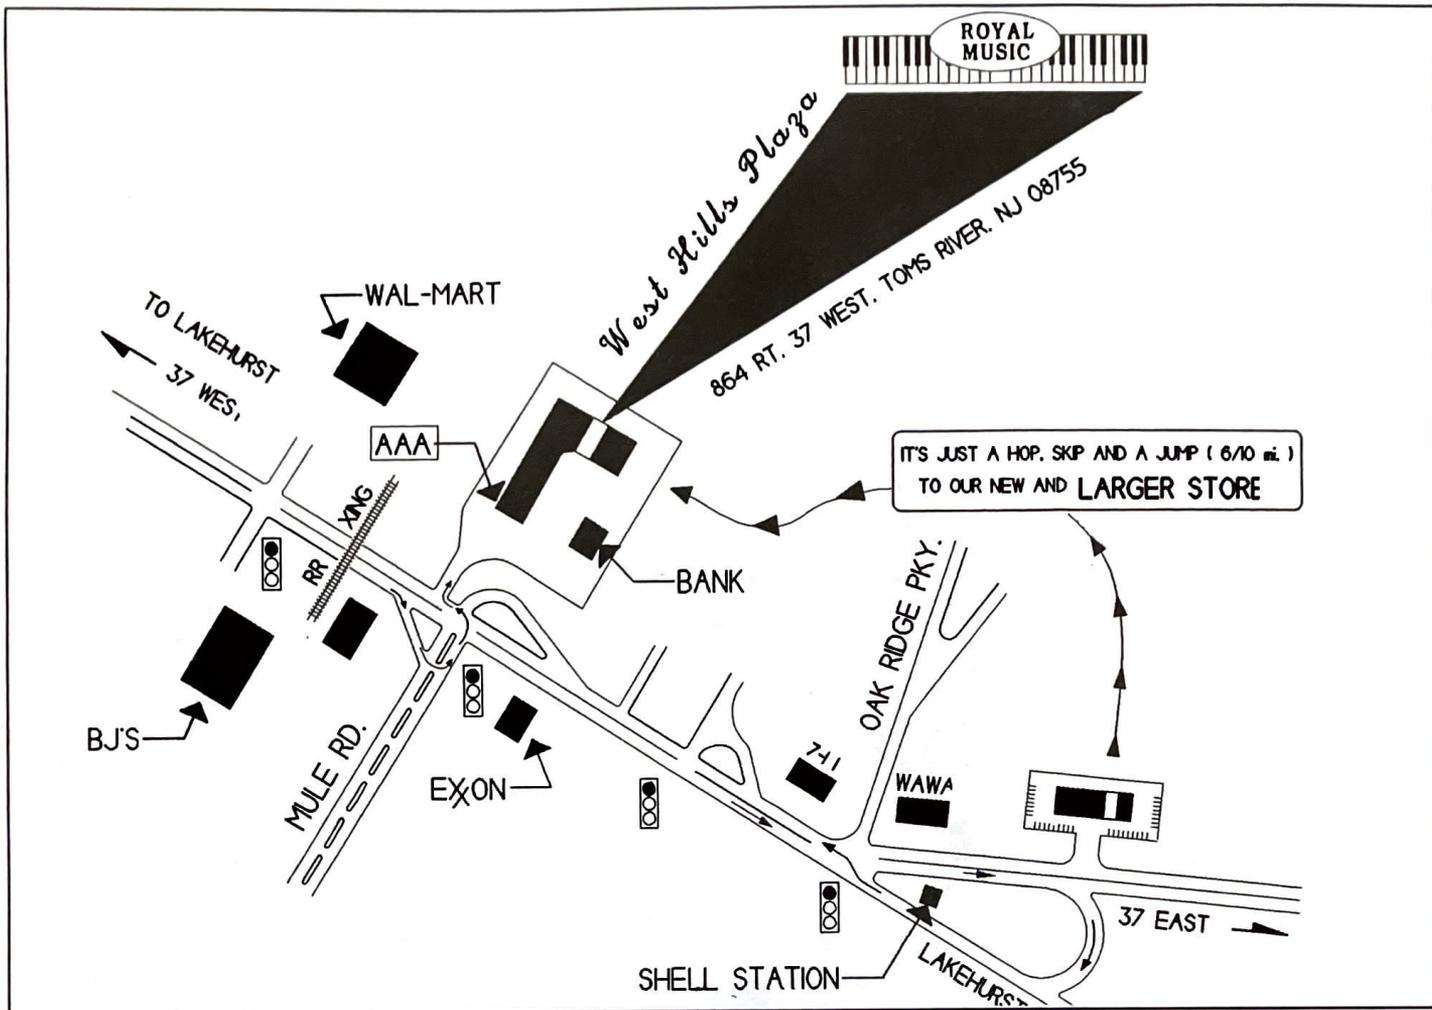

A customer visited Royal Music and wondered why so many people had upgraded their previous instruments. One of the Royal Troubadours then played a Technics G100 and explained our comprehensive lesson program. The customer is still enthralled with the technology of Technics Organs, but explains the ease of use is what sold her.

Royal Music has chosen the Technics Organs for the pure sound and ease of use that Panasonic has built into each one. Technics are the most reliable, easiest to use, best sounding organs available today.

Most consumers already have Panasonic products in their home, so why not consider a Technics Organ. At least give one a try before purchasing your next instrument.

You owe it to your ears.

Royal Music and Technics Organs the best combination for the Jersey Shore.
